André Le Nôtre initially planned a maze of unadomed parts in 1565, but in 1569, Charles Ferrulat advised tous! WX to include thirty-nine fountains, each representing one of the fables of Aespo. The work was carried out between 1672 and 1677. Water jets spurting from the animals mouths were conceived to give the impression of speech between the creatures. There was a plaque with a caption and a quatrat muritten by the poet basa de Benerade next to each fountain. A detailed description of the labyrinth, its fables and sculptures is given in Perratific Labyrinte de Versailles, illustrated with engravings by Sebastien Lederc. Incredibly popular when it was published, the work consists of highly detailed lithographs of some of the most famous fand lesses-known) country houses in England that were first constructed during the Tudor and Stuart periods. Nash travelled throughout England to create this work and made incredibly accurate sketches of the houses on site. However, rather than including only an image of the buildings and rooms, Nash opted to bring the scenes to life with romantic tableaux of Tudor and Stuard domestic life. This approach was very popular, and the plates were reproduced by many sources, which ranged from academic texts to travel posters. The estement that this work gave Nash brought him to the attention of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, who, in the 1840s, commissioned him to produce drawings and water colours of court life at Windsor Castle.

I] et Lamy [vol. II-V], 1780-86], 540 x 360 mm, (21 1/4 x 14 3/16 ⁻¹), Five volumes. FIRST EDITION Zuriauben (1720-55) was a military historian from Zug in Switzerland and a lieutenant general in the French army. Laborice (1734-94) was the hunchbacked valet of Louis XV, and a great favorite of the monarch. The first two volumes of text, describing the geography and history of the country, have their origin in Zuriaubens* "Historice Millitaire des Suisses," published in Paris in 1751. The third volume of text an indepth index to the work prepared by François Antion Questant. The engravings are striking to begin with because of the dimensions of the book, are well set off in our volumes by vast untrimmed margins, and range from the (mostly) dramatic and impressionistic to the (less frequent but quite lovely) tranquil and lifelike.

124	396	568			Prout, Samuel	Facsimiles of Sketches Mode in Flanders and Germany: On the Walls	1	fo.; Plates; half bound					Art - Landscape - Belgium - Germany	English		Factimiles of Sketches Made in Flanders and Germany: On the Walls, Cologne, 1833. Prout was a landscape watercolorist, printmaker, and well-known teacher. Prout drew feely on the stone with a firm but crumbling line, ideally suted to the quaint, eroded architecture he loved to portray. Tone was obtained by printing on pale gray paper and then adding highlights by hand with white gouache. When the Napoleonic Wave need in 1814, pace-erdic conditions enabled people to travel, leading to the production of lithographic scenes from Europe. These were most often published in sets, sometimes with accompanying text, through which patrons could vicariously satisfy their wanderfust.

Claude Mollet (ca. 1564 – shortly before 1564), premier jardnired val Roy — first gardener to three French kings, Henri IV, Louis XIII and the young Louis XV — was a member of the Mollet dynasty of French garden designers in the seventeenth century. His father was Jacques Mollet, gardener at the chaeu of Ance, there it talian formal gardening was introduced to France and where Claude apprenticed, and his son was André Mollet, who took the French style to Holland, Sweden and England. Mollet's volume Théâtre des plans et jardningsey, which contains autobiographical information, was published by his son in 1652, after his death. The manuscript was written many years before, about 1613–15, and revised over the years.
